Chapter 1 by Louise Bercone

The Year was 2078. Planet Earth was in worldwide warfare, North and South america, Europe and Australia versus Russia, Africa and Asia. Many countries had been destroyed, decimated by the nuclear attacks. Radiation filled the oceans and the sky and many holidays including Christmas, thanksgiving and Easter were forgotten. All religion was gone and so was all peace, all everybody thought about, was the war.

"Delta Unit, move forward into the village." Me and the rest of my unit obliged, our P4Q Assault Rifles at the ready, "exercise caution when entering. Them Russians could be anywhere." The village of Desnogorsk was one of the main supply towns used by the Insurgent Side, and our orders were to take it.

Closing towards the town walls, the alarm suddenly went off at shots burst out, deafening us. Hover Patrol Vehicles burst out the gate and flew right past us, they hadn't noticed us, they noticed Alpha unit. Without a second thought, we opened fire. They were obviously surprised by our attack as two HPVs crashed and exploded a few metres away from us. More bombs went off and the main attack was launched.

large HPVs. Then the CAUs(Cammo Assault Vehilcles) sarted to pop out of the sand, buzzing down three of our six HPVs.

He were devastated, but not unprepared. We counter attacked with out regret, or remorse, annihilating the enemy.
